Újra kisdiák lehettem…

Nekünk volt a legjobb tanító nénink, Jo, aki találkozott a királynővel. A képen nem könyvből, hanem színesrudakkal mesélt. Ki találja ki, hogy melyik meséről lehetett szó?

Amit hallok, azt elfelejtem.
Amit látok, arra emlékezem.
Amit csinálok, azt megértem.

A délelőtti elmélet után mindig mindent megcsináltunk gyakorlatban is.

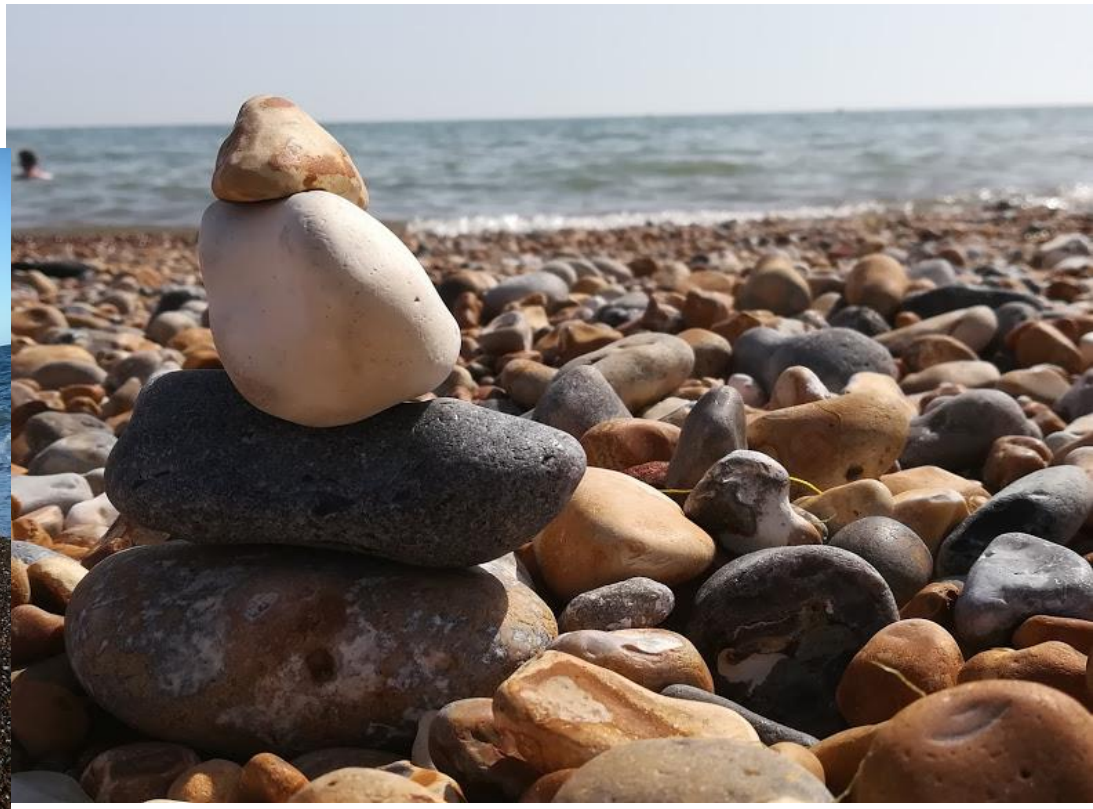

A tengerpart öt percre van az iskolától,
az ebédszünetet ott töltöttük.☺

Hétvégi kirándulások:
Leeds, Canterbury, Windsor, Oxford. Brightonban pedig belecsöppentünk a Pride fesztiválba

LEEDS CASTLE

Leeds Castle gets its name from the ancient Saxon manor of Esledes recorded on this site in the Domesday Book of 1086. Following the Norman Conquest of 1066, many manors in Kent were fortified to remind the local people and any future invaders of the strength of the nobility. Construction of the first stone castle on this site began in 1119 by Robert de Crèvecoeur, a descendant of one of William I's (c.1056-1100) knights. Despite its king, in 1139 and 1321, but otherwise saw little military action. Its great beauty is not accidental. The area surrounding the castle was carefully designed and included raised viewing points from which the building could be seen at its best. The convenient position between the strategically important cities of London and Dover, as well as its proximity to good hunting lands, may have led to the castle's continued popularity after it passed into Royal hands.

The castle was owned by the medieval the Fairfaxes in the 18th century, and the aristocratic Martins in the 19th century. In 1926 it was bought by an Anglo-American heiress, the Hon. Olive Wilson Filmer, later to become Lady Baillie (1887-1974). She undertook extensive renovations and used the castle as her country house, entertaining the rich and famous for nearly fifty years. She left the castle to a charitable trust that is now responsible for its preservation
